When the Rams moved from Los Angeles to St. Louis, they kept their place as the second-best team in the division, moving up to number one when the San Francisco 49ers moved to the West Coast. But instead of keeping the number one, the Rams are now out of the division entirely. Here's the entire breakdown: There's no official explanation for why the Rams are out of the NFC West. Their official website had this to say: We are moving to St. Louis and playing in front of the best fans in the league. As a result of this, we have decided to release the San Francisco 49ers, who will move into the NFC West with the Cardinals, Seahawks and Rams. However, the NFL's official explanation for the switch is that the Rams are being punished for having a monopoly on the Los Angeles media market, as the formula for divisional bids calls for the team with the greater population. What the Rams have been experiencing in the Los Angeles market is not punishment. For a team that got 25,566 fans for their home game against the Packers, they're being rewarded for being the best in the NFC West and having the best merchandise sales in the league. Unfortunately, with the Rams officially out of the division, they'll probably be out of the market for some time. So they'll have to make plans to take a trip to Seattle or San Francisco.
